

U.S., Syria Patch Relations

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — The presidents of the United States and Syria agreed Sunday to resume diplomatic relations broken off in the 1967 Middle East war.

The announcement came just before President Nixon ended his visit to Syria to go to Israel for the fourth stop on his Middle East tour. Nixon and President Hafez Assad reached the agreement during private talks here, but the move had been expected for some time.

A ceremony to raise the Stars and Stripes was postponed at the last moment Sunday. A U.S. official at the American Interests section of the Italian Embassy told newsmen it was postponed at the request of the Syrian Foreign Ministry until a more formal observance Monday morning.

"We look forward now to an expansion of contacts and cooperation," Nixon said as he stood smiling beside Assad on the steps of the Syrian presidential palace.

Assad replied that "we are determined to start a new phase in our relations based on mutual interest." He referred to cultural and economic ties.

The appearance of Nixon and Assad, cordially and repeatedly shaking hands for news photographers on a hot June afternoon, would have been regarded as impossible last winter. Then, in the aftermath of October's fourth Arab-Israeli war, Syria was denouncing the United States angrily as "the imperialist protector" of its enemy Israel.

The turnaround seems to be mainly the result of the efforts of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who helped negotiate the troop separation agreements on the Suez Canal and the Golan Heights.

Syrian official sources told a newsmen that the improved relations with Washington will not lead to a cooled-off friendship with the Soviet Union, as was the case in Egypt after the Kissinger-mediated cease-fire and troop disengagement with Israel.

Assad seemed to stress this in recent public statements. "Syria wants to make friends with all ... The widening Syrian horizon does not mean a change in Soviet-Syrian relations," he said.

The Syrian public's first reaction to the U.S.-Syrian detente appeared favorable, particularly after remarks by Nixon at a state banquet

Saturday night that gained wide publicity.

"Of course we understand your concern ... about such vital matters as the Palestinian question ... (and) borders ... The U.S. is now directly involved" in efforts for a peaceful settlement of these problems, Nixon told Assad.

This was the first time Nixon had expressed concern about the Palestinians in the course of his five-day Middle East tour.

The Syrians say that if there is to be peace, a closer association or even friendship with Washington is requisite.

Renewing relations also is expected to open the way for Syrian participation in an American offer of a $250 million aid package for the war-scarred Middle East.

Israelis Urged To Take Risks ... In Search For Peace

JERUSALEM (AP) — President Nixon arrived in Jerusalem on Sunday to the cheers of 100,000 flag-waving Israelis, then publicly pressed Israeli leaders at a state dinner to take diplomatic and political risks to spur the search for a lasting Middle East peace.

Nixon declared shortly after his arrival from Syria that it takes courage to wage war, but it takes "a different kind of courage to wage peace."

"It requires risks just as war requires risks. And the stakes are high, just as the stakes in war are high."

Although the President did not recommend any specific concessions in his remarks at the Israeli dinner, White House aides agreed that Nixon was nudging Israel's new government for movement in negotiations with the Arabs.

Nixon said Israel faces two choices: "One is the easy way ... the status quo ... But there is another way ... the right way, the way of statesmanship, not the way of politicians alone."

One Israeli source close to the government said of Nixon's remarks: "We were exhorted to take risks but there was no promise to stand behind us if we take the risks."

But Nixon assured his listeners that "under no circumstances will the fact that the United States is seeking a better relationship with some of Israel's neighbors mean that our friendship or support for Israel ... is any less."

Nixon made no pledges of military aid, nor any promises to maintain the Middle East power balance and support Israel's insistence on new and secure borders. Such statements have been hallmarks of past Nixon speeches.

But White House aides pointed to the $350 million in primarily military assistance Nixon is seeking for Israel next year as proof of continuing support. U.S. sources said Nixon and Israeli leaders had discussed a long-term arms program prior to the state dinner and Nixon's departure statement Monday would disclose new moves on that issue.

The President's next stop — his last in the Middle East — will be a one-day visit Monday to Jordan. Then he flies back to Washington, stopping Tuesday night in the Azores for talks with Portuguese President Antonio de Spinoia.

At the banquet, shortly before Nixon spoke, President Ephraim Katzir said Israel is ready to help in American peace efforts in the Middle East.

"I can assure you that we are eager to pursue the path of dialogue and negotiation which you are endeavoring to bring between ourselves and our neighbors," Katzir said.

"Under your leadership, the United States has written an impressive chapter in the diplomatic chronicles of our times. Your very visit to our region ... dramatically illustrates your determination to advance the cause of reconciliation."

Nixon, the first American President to visit Israel, went into a round of talks with Premier Yitzhak Rabin's new government shortly after his arrival, pressing with his peace mission after five days of meetings with Arab leaders.

In Jerusalem, police said more than 70,000 persons lined the streets. About half were children in school uniforms, most of them waving tiny American and Israeli flags.

Chants and cheers of welcome sounded as Nixon's limousine passed. Most of the time the President remained seated in the open-top bulletproof car flown from the United States. He stood up to wave only when the crowds thickened.

But in the back of many Israeli minds was Nixon's promise to Egypt of help for the development of nuclear power for agricultural and industrial purposes.

Moshe Dayan, the former Israeli defense minister, told newsmen Nixon's Middle East tour "will be a historically fatal mistake" if its only contribution is the sale of nuclear reactors to the Egyptians.

Ventriloquist Wins Nebraska Pageant

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Kearney — Experience, dear old dad and a dummy named Oliver all were credited by the new "Miss Nebraska" Sunday for assisting her to the 1974 title.

Sharon Sue Pelc of Johnstown outshone 19 other beauties for the traditional state honor. Competing as "Miss Valley County," the brown-eyed brunette is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Pelc of rural Johnstown.

After giving her rancher dad a Father's Day hug of elation, the bubbly winner explained that it was his nudging which had gotten her into ventriloquism as a child. The dummy who helped her to the title, a rowdy comic dubbed "Oliver," had been a father-daughter creation four years ago.

A graduate of a Denver school of ventriloquism, the poised Miss Pelc offered an act similar to the one winning her first runner-up honors at the 1973 pageant. Now 22, and just graduated from Chadron State College, she said the previous try had helped pave the way this year.

"I think the extra experience and my age were both assets," said the 5-9 slenderella (36-23-37). "I had a great time last year and of course this was even better."

Chosen first runnerup this year was Annette Greene, 20, of Imperial, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln junior entered as "Miss Lincoln." She also received one of two swim suit trophies in preliminary competition. A vocal medley was her talent entry.

Other runners-up were Pamela Jo Meuret of Brunswick ("Miss Neligh"), second; Lynelle Frankforter of Lincoln, (Miss Lancaster County), third; and Dori Richard of Mitchell ("Miss Kearney"), fourth. All received scholarships ranging from $25 to $200.

Miss Pelc, a drama and speech major who hopes to go into teaching, will receive a $1,000 scholarship, a $500 wardrobe and the use of a car for a year. She will also represent the state in September's "Miss America" pageant at Atlantic City.

A highly unusual repeat tribute was awarded Patricia Gilles, entered as "Miss Bellevue." Recipient of last year's "Miss Congeniality" award, she again won the highly coveted personality trophy voted upon by the contestants themselves.

In addition to the five scholarship winners, five other girls were selected as finalists. They were Jacqueline Berniklau of Maxwell ("Miss Kearney State"), Patricia McCarville of O'Neill ("Miss North Central"), Veronica Markey of Bellevue ("Miss Offutt Air Force Base"), Linda Jacobsen of Omaha ("Miss Omaha") and Sharlene Biltoff of Edgar ("Miss Thayer County").

Miss Pelc had also taken a preliminary award in swim suit competition. Talent honors went to Miss Richard and Miss Frankforter.

The new queen, a graduate of Ainsworth High School, has a 20-year-old sister, Rita. The family ranches about one mile from the village of Johnstown — pop. 80.

The winner's father said Sharon's ventriloquism dates back to "when she made some of her dolls talk." Making dozens of appearances a year with Oliver and another dummy named Ali Ann, she has a repertoire of some 400 songs and skits. In the pageant act, her own silky voice contrasted with Oliver's distinct raspiness.

Children Come Together

By H. J. ANDERSON

Mark Powell has the constant, insistent happiness of all Down Syndrome patients.

But he has a very normal four-year-old's desire to do everything his brother, Michael, does.

Mark is 7, but about the same size and mental maturity as Michael, age 4.

They have to be separated during the day while Mark attends a human development school of the Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation.

That is one reason the two enjoy attending a new Respite Care program, according to their mother, Gwen Powell.

The program, sponsored by the Capital Association for Retarded Citizens, brings together retarded children and their brothers and sisters for three to four hours of play.

It is designed to give parents an evening off, and allow retarded and normal children to learn about each other, program coordinator Mrs. Diana Fricke said.

Intermingling is especially important to the development of retarded children, she said.

Mrs. Powell said her sons have missed only one of the Wednesday night sessions since they began May 1st. She said she and her husband use the free time to be alone with a 22-month-old Vietnamese girl they've just adopted.

David Powell is the associate pastor of Trinity United Methodist Church.

The Respite Care programs are 6-9:30 p.m. every Wednesday night in the LOMR human development school.

Mrs. Fricke said she set it up that way so parents could go out to eat and see a movie, if they wanted.

She and the other volunteers take care of eight to ten children each week, she said.

"People think it's depressing to work with the children and it just isn't. They're all so happy; I go away happy every week," Mrs. Fricke said.

She was introduced to retarded children through a year-long course on problem children she took while she lived in Texas two years ago, she said.

She arranges a program for the children each week, she said. They all participate in physical activity for the first hour, she said, either at a nearby park or with indoor equipment at the school.

Next is a craft period. Each child does a crafts project, giving them a chance to use their hands, she said.

They enjoy taking their projects home to their parents, she said.

The older children often like to go off by themselves during this time, Mrs. Fricke said. They play cards, dance, or cook refreshments for the younger children.

The last hour is intentionally subdued, so the children begin to relax.

Volunteers help the children with puzzles, read to them in any quiet activities the children want, Mrs. Fricke said.

That's the time a one-to-one relationship between counselor and child is most important, she said. She hopes volunteers will increase in number as rapidly as children are.

The other adult volunteer, Mrs. Valery Dettwiler, said she learns something new about each child every week.

One child concentrates very hard on activities; one is aggressive; one, who only stares at the floor, is unresponsive, she said.

Teenage volunteer Carol Hommens describes similar observations about the children differently. Of the "unresponsive" child, she said: "She's hung up on feet and the floor."

Nebraska Guard Faces Threat Of Merging Units

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Seventy-seven Nebraska National Guardsmen will be recruiting young men and women across the state during the next two weeks, while their fellow Army guardsmen are at Ft. Carson, Colo., for summer camp.

Asst. Adj. Gen. John Stephenson said in a recent interview the 77 guardsmen are part of phase two in an all-out drive to fill the guard's thinned-out ranks and head-off a threatened merger of some units.

Stephenson said the units in jeopardy are at Scottsbluff, Sidney, Ogallala, North Platte, Crete, Wayne, O'Neill and Wahoo.

The Nebraska Army Guard is authorized to have 4,452 persons, but in January 1973, it was reportedly the furthest in the nation from its authorized capacity. In June 1973, the guard's total strength was 3,981, Stephenson said.

Facing a possible nationwide cutback in funds this summer, the Nebraska Guard has to either dramatically increase enlistments or merge some units.

Stephenson said the units in jeopardy are at Scottsbluff, Sidney, Ogallala, North Platte, Crete, Wayne, O'Neill and Wahoo.

The Guard chose to gear up recruitment and won the support of the Legislature. State senators enacted two bills sought by Adj. Gen. Francis Winner. One measure grants enlistees a $100 bonus for each year they signed up for; the other gives National Guardsmen 50% off tuition at any state college or vocational school.

The first phase of recruitment sent many of the Guard's full-time employees to various public locations around the state.

Ruckelshaus Expects More Surprises

WASHINGTON (AP) — William D. Ruckelshaus lent his support Sunday to Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger but said "there will be other surprises" yet to come in the Watergate scandal.

Ruckelshaus, a former deputy attorney general and onetime acting director of the FBI, said "There is information that I'm aware of that has not yet become public" and possibly not even reached the House impeachment panel, he said.

Ruckelshaus, who resigned his Justice Department post last

Oct. 20 in the furor over President Nixon's firing of special prosecutor Archibald Cox, would not elaborate on what future developments might be expected.

But he made it clear he thinks Kissinger should be cleared in the wiretapping controversy which led the secretary of state to threaten resignation unless there is a stop to questions over his truthfulness.

Ruckelshaus appeared on the CBS program "Face the Nation" on the eve of the second anniversary of the Watergate break-in.

He said his familiarity with the case tends to confirm that Kissinger's role was "pretty much as he described it" to Congress and the public.

The secretary of state has said he did not order the installation of the taps, but rather had first complained of leaks and then supplied the FBI with the names of persons around him who had access to national security information.

His credibility on that score has come under attack on the basis of FBI memos which tend to indicate Kissinger could have asked directly for wiretaps. But Ruckelshaus said those documents are now being interpreted "for purposes for which they were never prepared... the definition of words like 'initiate' and 'directed.' It's unfair."

Each of the recruiters, Stephenson said, has attended adjunct general school at Ft. Benjamin Harrison and is trained in enlistment techniques.

"Each recruiter will follow up on the prospective enlistees contacted in phase one," he said. "And each recruiter has a goal of two enlistments per week, for a total of four. If everyone meets that, the guard will be at 100% of authorized strength."

For now, however, the race is against time. If the Nebraska Guard is told to halt recruiting due to a lack of funds before the goal is reached, Stephenson said, "it could put us in a bad situation."

Hoover Operations 'Improper' — Saxbe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe said Sunday the FBI engaged in improper practices as part of a counterintelligence operation approved by the late J. Edgar Hoover.

The former Ohio senator said also that "it was fun" airing barbs at President Nixon before he joined the administration, but that now, "regardless of what my personal opinions are, I have to have, and will have, a loyalty to the leader of this country."

"If I felt called upon to directly criticize the President," he said, "I'd feel also called upon to resign."

Saxbe complained of Hoover's one-man control of the FBI and commended the current director, Clarence M. Kelley, for his effort to open the agency to public scrutiny.

The attorney general's remarks came on the NBC radio program, Speaking Freely.

Saxbe said that during Hoover's tenure, "various practices were brought up there ... that were just not right."

Without specifying incidents, Saxbe said the counterintelligence operation "meant that (Hoover) was taking active measures to stop the violence on campus and the racist activities, and what he considered Communist activities."

Asked if the operation involved "improper conduct," Saxbe replied "I'm afraid so."

Justice Department sources familiar with the issue have said there is no evidence that the attorneys general in office at the time knew of Hoover's project.

Saxbe said that under Hoover, the FBI developed such independence that "the Presidents were actually patronizing to Mr. Hoover, ... the attorneys general had little or no influence and sometimes not even contact."

Congress, he said, "pushed money off on them, they never had to fight for a budget, they pulled a figure out of the air and got whatever they wanted."

Under Kelley, the attorney general said, "you're going to see an openness, and you're going to see that they do operate with great regard for our Constitution and the rights of individual people."

Saxbe noted that he has assigned a Justice Department committee, which includes Kelley, to determine the extent of Hoover's counterintelligence operation, and "I expect to take it before Congress and to tell Congress exactly what happened."

Questioned about his habit of controversial statements, the former senator acknowledged that "I've had to learn to keep my mouth shut on a lot of things."

"You know, as a senator, you can have opinions on everything whether you know anything about them or not," Saxbe said. "Here I had to watch ... it does cramp my style to some degree. But I think it's good for me."

When an interviewer remarked that as a senator, Saxbe "said some pretty juicy things" about Nixon, the attorney general replied:

"Yeah, and it was fun."

Feline Finalists Vie For Glamorous Title

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Rotten Ralph has been under the care of a cat psychologist because he just doesn't like people. But he is one of the nine finalists in the Glamour Kitty of the Year contest.

Ralph and the other finalists will be heading for Miami Beach next month for a week in the sun and the judging to select the national winner.

It's all sponsored by a Philadelphia-based company that makes cat products. The winning cat will get to appear on the company's packages for a year.

Company officials say that nearly 3,000 cats were entered this year. The nine finalists were chosen here last week.

There is a cat named Frazier in the finals and the sponsors say he is notable because he looks like a dog. There are two cats that play the piano and one, which company officials swear, does an imitation of John Wayne walking.

A cat named Snowball, from Buffalo, N.Y., is a sentimental favorite in the contest. Snowball is deaf, and follows all his commands by sign language.

In Miami Beach, the cats, and two adult chaperones, will be carried around in a small car made up like a mouse. On the big night, they will take part in three events.

First comes the costume event, which is kind of a bathing suit pageant for kitties. Then, it's on to the talent division where the cats will perform their specialties, including a number of athletic events.

For the final event, their owners will be asked a series of questions. Then, while the master of ceremonies sings, the winning cat will parade down the runway.

Rotten Ralph is owned by two Philadelphia women, who say they entered in the contest in the hope of improving Ralph's disposition.

It seems that Ralph snarls instead of purrs, and when he's petted, he has a habit of spitting. The cat psychologist told the two women that they couldn't expect much better from a cat named Rotten Ralph.

So the women said they started calling him Prince Rotten Ralph, but it didn't do any good.

RALPH ... is one rotten cat.

Guerrillas Murder Union Head

Nicosia (UPI) — A union leader who supported President Archbishop Makarios was shot to death and two persons, one a policeman, were wounded by automatic weapons fire in an attack believed staged by anti-Makarios guerrillas, police said Sunday.

Authorities said guerrillas opened fire as Andreas Arneftis, Limassol district secretary of the Pancyprrian Farmers Union (PEK), and two others emerged Saturday night from a bar in the village of Zakati near the port of Limassol.

Arneftis, a Makarios backer, was killed instantly, while the men with him, Police Lieutenant Andreas Kokkinos and civilian Costakis Antoniou, were reported in serious condition.

Police blamed the Eoka B organization, which backs the union of Cyprus with Greece, for the shooting.

New York — Television will be putting itself on trial if it covers the impeachment trial of President Nixon, a former broadcast news executive has observed. Fred W. Friendly, who was president of CBS news during the middle 1960's, warned that unless the networks subdued their competitive drives in covering the impeachment, television might "overwhelm the event" and interfere with due process.

AIM Organizes To Seek U.N. Membership

Mobridge, S.D. (UPI) — An American Indian Movement-sponsored treaty conference ended Sunday with establishment of an international body formed to apply for United Nations membership on behalf of all Indians.

In forming the international Indian Treaty Council at the conclusion of the nine-day conference, the participants directed the council to open negotiations with the U.S. government through the state department for the return of Indian land.

The Indians, who now deal with the government through the Department of Interior and the Bureau of Indian Affairs, said they would negotiate as a sovereign people rather than as U.S. citizens.

AIM leader Russell Means, one of a dozen authors of the "Declaration of Continuing Independence," told the convention that the conference would be remembered as a historic step for Indians.

"This convention proves, that the Indians when left to themselves can produce something as beautiful as this document ... without the help of the BIA," Means said.

Many of the Indians from 97 tribes prepared to return to their homes Sunday, but some remained for a caravan to Aberdeen Monday where they scheduled three days of talks with BIA area office.

AIM spokesmen said the estimated 1,000 persons at the conference session Saturday night would have been larger, but some stayed away because of an outbreak of hepatitis.

Personnel at the convention first aid station spent most of Saturday inoculating everybody at the site.

Firecracker Ban Decision Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission will decide Monday whether to impose a midnight ban on the sale and manufacture of firecrackers, along with stiff new safety standards and labeling for all other types of fireworks.

The action is opposed by a group of Chinese and U.S. fireworks manufacturers who fear they might have to repurchase $50 million worth of banned goods just before the July 4 period.

They petitioned the commission last Friday to stay any changes for at least 30 days, and schedule a public hearing on their request for no new regulations before July 31, 1975.

If that fails, their attorneys said the manufacturers will seek a court injunction to prevent interference with the $180 million a year business.

Government attorneys worked through the weekend preparing recommendations for the five-member commission which has promised a decision by "the close of business" Monday.

Estimating that fireworks-related injuries sent 6,600 persons — the bulk of them under 15 years of age — to hospital emergency rooms last year, the commission last May 17 proposed the new rules which would carry the full force of law.

Fireworks manufacturers and traders from Taiwan, Macao, Hong Kong and Oklahoma challenged the injury estimates, however, noting that the 6,600 figure was merely a projection of the 201 persons treated in a nationwide sampling of hospitals.

Brezhnev Optimistic About Summit

MOSCOW (AP) — Leonid Brezhnev said Sunday he expects his upcoming summit with President Nixon to produce "good new agreements . . . in spite of the pessimism that has been sown in some layers of the population and especially in the United States."

"I think we will please the people of the United States and our country," the Communist party chief told newsmen after casting his vote in parliamentary elections.

Nixon is scheduled to arrive here June 27 and Brezhnev said his third summit meeting with the President would last "somewhere around one week."

Brezhnev gave no details of the expected agreements.

However, in a speech Friday night Brezhnev announced Russia was ready "right now" to conclude an underground nuclear test ban agreement with the United States.

The two nations are signatories to an 11-year-old accord prohibiting nuclear tests in the atmosphere and under the sea, and there has been speculation that a team of American technical experts here was discussing plans for an agreement to be signed during the upcoming summit.

After voting for Premier Alexei Kosygin for election to the Union of the Soviet House of Parliament and Defense Minister Andrei Grechko for the lower house, the Union of Nationalities, Brezhnev posed for photographers and chatted briefly with foreign reporters.

Asked about the themes to be discussed with Nixon, the Russian leader laughed and said only, "Oh, very many."

Brezhnev appeared in excellent health and was evidently less anxious than his security guards to leave the newsmen. He declined to discuss the substance of the talks with President Nixon.

Queried about the most important problem facing the two leaders during their meetings, he responded, "What do you think? We'll be discussing petty questions? We'll be discussing large, important questions. So there we are."

Explaining his reluctance to elaborate, the party leader grinned and said, "Mr. Nixon will be angry with me, saying that I've said everything before the talks were held."

He said that Nixon's itinerary here has not been settled yet.

But Brezhnev said there were preliminary plans to fly to the Black Sea resort of Yalta and to the Byelorussian capital of Minsk.

"I would go to Yalta with pleasure . . . I think Mr. Nixon will also," he said.

The Soviet chief said the Kremlin has given Nixon the opportunity to choose his itinerary. Laughing heartily, he declared: "It's not up to me. It's Mr. Nixon. Whatever he asks for we'll show him."

Noting the President visited Leningrad and Kiev during his 1972 summit meeting here, Brezhnev said Nixon may also travel to southern Siberia and the Russian city of Volgograd.

Brezhnev said he was satisfied with the European situation despite the death of French President Georges Pompidou and the resignation of West German Chancellor Willy Brandt.

The European Security Conference "can't go on and on," Brezhnev said. He added he was hopeful for a successful conclusion since "the principal questions have already been resolved. Only small secondary things are left and they don't play an important role."

To this end, he concluded, "I've recently received new assurances from heads of states that are of positive tones."

Motel Guests Offered Church

Wilbraham, Mass. (AP) — Robert Chapman, owner of the Wilbraham Motel here, is offering something new for Sunday guests.

Eighteen of his motel's two dozen rooms have picture windows looking out on an adjoining drive-in theater. The rooms are even equipped with the theater's speakers.

Starting next Sunday, the Rev. Darryl L. Larson of the Evangelical Covenant Church will begin conducting Sunday services at the drive-in. The Rev. Larson said the services are designed to attract people who would not ordinarily dress up for church.

Chapman decided to take it a step further. His guests not only won't have to dress up, they won't have to dress. They will be able to watch the services from bed.

"We think this is something unique in the country, something nobody else has to offer," says Chapman.

Shootout Events Questioned; Chief Killed

CASCADE, Idaho (AP) — Officials tried Sunday to piece together the events that led to a high speed chase and shootout involving the police chief of a nearby town and three other officers. The chief was killed.

James Perkins, 51, the chief of police in the resort community of McCall, population 1,800, was shot to death Saturday after the other three officers chased him 13 miles along a narrow, winding mountain road.

"That's the first time that has ever happened," said Valley County Deputy Jerry Conklin. "That's the first time I've ever had to shoot at a guy with a badge on."

Conklin and two other policemen started chasing Perkins after he drove through Cascade in his patrol car at high speed, authorities said. Other official said he also was heard shouting over the police network.

"I stayed back a ways," said Conklin. "The chief started firing at us and blasted out the rear window in his car . . ."

A few minutes later, Perkins lost control of his car and skidded across the road into another auto and trailer. Perkins jumped out of the car, officials said, and started shooting at the family that owned the car. They fled.

The pursuing police cars arrived. "We tried about everything we could do to get him to throw down his gun," said Conklin. "But he was just mumbling incoherently. When he began shooting at us, we felt we had no choice but to stop him somehow."

Perkins, a veteran law officer who was described as a quiet, competent police chief, behaved normally earlier in the day, according to people who saw him. An autopsy was planned.

A doctor said Perkins died of gunshot and shotgun wounds in his chest. The other officers weren't hurt.

"We'll have to go back over his activities all day and see what we can find out," said County prosecutor Robert Remakus. "We don't know what prompted it and we don't know why he was driving down the road so fast."

Perkins, 51, had served seven years with the Idaho State Police in the Pocatello area. He was a native of Council, another small town 30 miles from Cascade and became police chief of McCall about a year ago.

Marred Painting Draws Crowds

CAMBRIDGE, England (AP) — Crowds flocked to Cambridge University Sunday for a look at the two-foot-high letters "IRA" scratched across Rubens' masterpiece "The Adoration of the Magi."

University officials said the defaced painting was viewed by hundreds of visitors jamming into King's College chapel, where the 128-foot-square canvas has hung for 13 years.

The "Adoration," painted in 1634 by the Dutch master Peter Paul Rubens, was bought at an auction in 1959 for $660,000 and given to the college two years later by London businessman Alfred Alinatt. Its present value is estimated to be at least $2.4 million.

Wealth Not Qualification

With a bit of understandable sarcasm, Senator Gerald Stromer of Kearney said in regard to the approaching end of his term in the Legislature: "... Since people have apparently decided that you need to be on a payroll or independently wealthy to serve in the Legislature, that may well be it for me."

He was referring to the May primary vote which defeated a proposed hike in the pay of senators from $400 to $875 a month. We doubt many voters had the thought in mind attributed to them by Stromer but such are still the practical results of that vote.

This is the thing that has us disenchanted with the skimpy pay for legislators. The system is one that demands more sacrifice financially than many people could ever make.

Obviously, the current $400 a month is not a living wage. It is often pointed out that $400 a month all year long when you work only six or seven months isn't all that bad.

But what do people think a person is going to do for the other five or six months out of the year? If you serve in the Legislature now, you could not hold down an average job. You would have to have a position that you could leave for half a year and then return to.

That greatly narrows the field of those who are able to seek a spot in the Legislature. It darn sure eliminates the vast majority of the average working men and women of the state.

It gives a built-in advantage for public office to professional and high-level executive type of people or those who, as Stromer says, are independently wealthy. It is one heck of a way to run a supposedly representative form of government.

A lot of those who oppose a decent wage for senators base their position on a feeling that the Legislature is unresponsive to their wishes and needs. This is largely a middle-income kind of need. And yet, in voting against a higher wage, they are perpetuating the very thing that is denying them equality of representation and a chance to get more of the kind of legislation they need and want.

If voters think the caliber of individual in the Legislature does not warrant an increase in pay, they lack real balance in their argument. An adequate level of pay could bring more competition into the races for seats in the Legislature and, thereby, improve the quality of senators.

The issue, of course, is a dead one for the time being but we hope that voters are slowly coming to a better understanding of what is involved in the pay issue and that they ultimately will give approval to an increase.

Sadat In Lincoln

Announcing that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat would visit the United States before the year is out, President Nixon said that the visiting dignitary would be shown not only Washington but other parts of the United States as well.

"We will not be able to match certainly what we have seen in the way of antiquities..." said Nixon to Sadat, "but I can assure you we will do all the best to demonstrate... that the American people have in their hearts nothing but the greatest affection for the Egyptian people."

The President is right in all regards. This 200-year-old country cannot match the thousands of years of history that are a part of the Middle East.

It is proper, too, that any visiting dignitary see Washington, and hopefully more than the inside of the White House. Finally, the President is absolutely right in inferring that you must see some other parts of this nation than Washington if you are to understand and appreciate it.

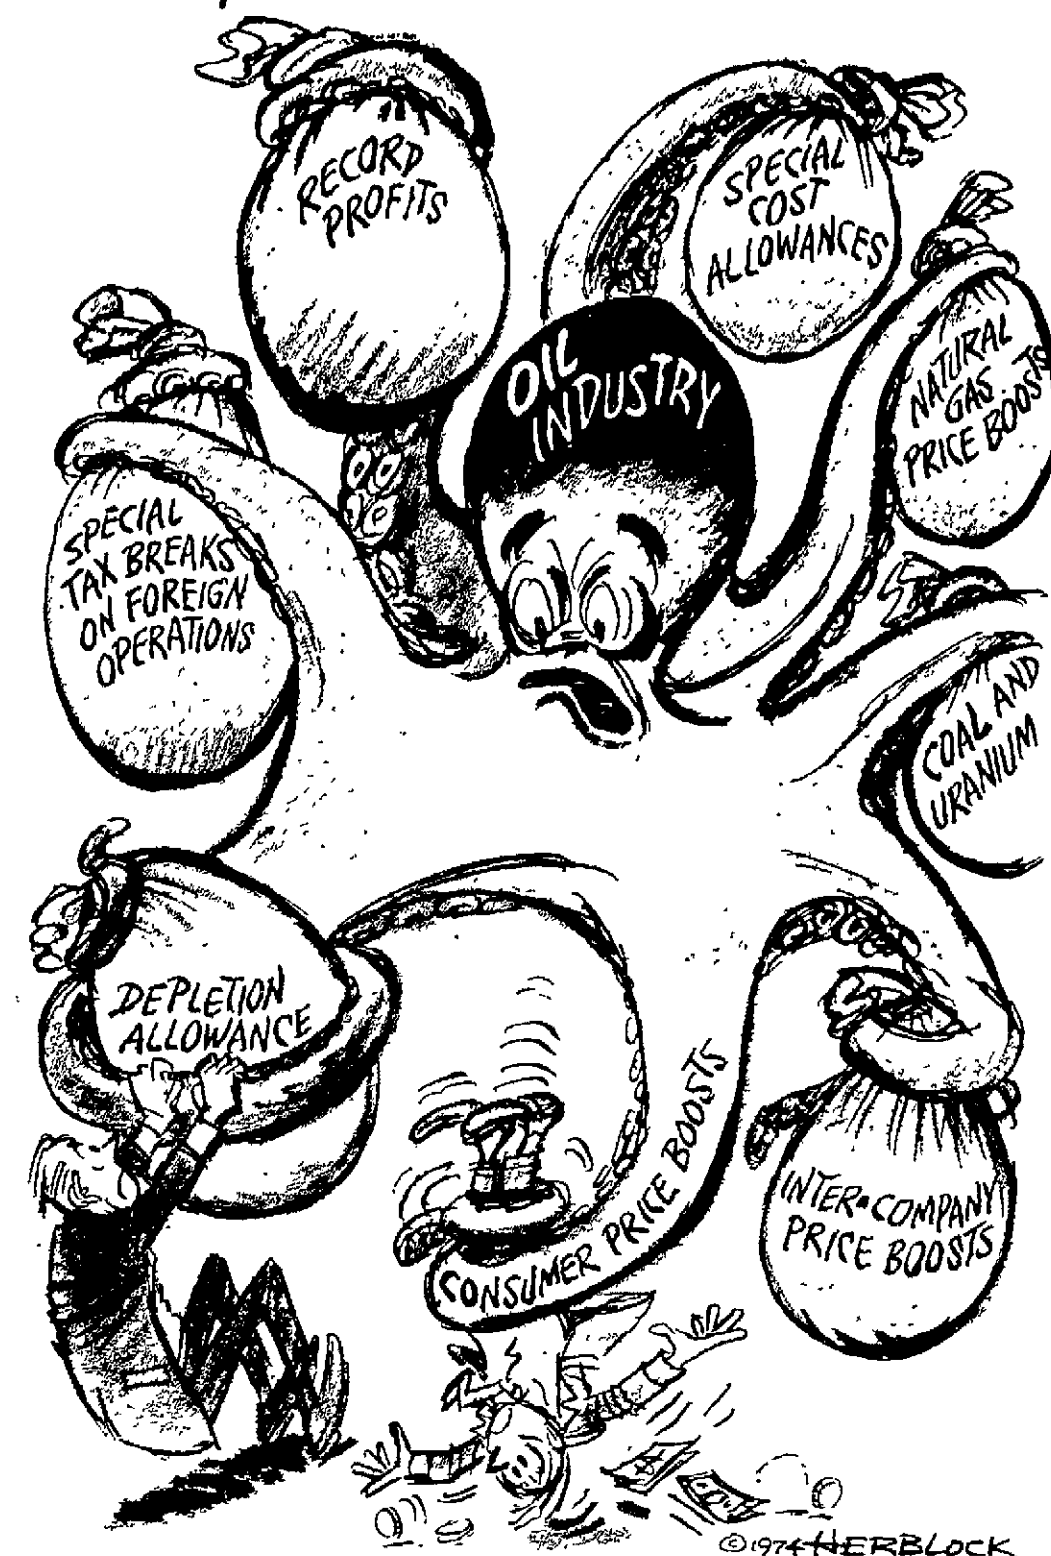

Supposedly, it is a far-fetched idea but wouldn't it be nice to have President Sadat visit in Lincoln? When we speak of getting out of Washington, we mean more than Chicago and California. We mean the great heartland of this nation.

It is a friendly reception President Nixon is wanting for President Sadat, what better place to come to than Lincoln? And if he wants to show that antiquity we have in this country, Nebraska offers it share of that. We would be amazed if such a visit to Lincoln ever took place but we are sincere in what we think are the merits of such a proposal.

Various parts of this country have their own distinctive characteristics. We believe this to be one of the more attractive regions, with a way of life that is appealing and human. And we don't think anyone can catch all the real flavor of this country until he has been exposed to the Midwest.

Sadat in Lincoln would find a welcome that would not be exceeded anywhere else in the country.

'Help! Let Go Of That Tentacle!'

MARQUIS CHILDS

WASHINGTON — The partnership that means most at the moment for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1975 finds Sen. Henry M. "Scoop" Jackson and George Meany of the AFL-CIO locked in fond embrace. Jackson is carrying the ball for the AFL-CIO policy of keeping out foreign imports that allegedly threaten American jobs.

Happily he can combine this with another conviction he shares with the venerable head of organized labor. That is to restore wherever possible the die-hard barriers of the cold war with the Soviet Union.

He made a gallant effort to give the secretary of defense veto power over the transfer of "goods and technology" that might increase the military capability of the Soviet Union. Opponents of his amendment charged that the Pentagon under the old cold-war dictates opposed the sale of anything — wigs and brassieres were cited — to communist countries.

George Meany

Jackson was partially successful in tying an amendment onto a military procurement bill, although it was watered down, to give the Defense Department power of recommendation rather than outright veto. This came after a sneak play around right end by Jackson had been frustrated by the vigilance of Majority Leader Mike Mansfield.

Repeatedly in arguing for his amendment, which would in effect take controls away from the Department of Commerce and turn them over to Defense, Jackson cried up the 100% support of organized labor. You're proposing to export American jobs, he told the opponents of the sweeping change.

As evidence he cited the protocol signed in Moscow by the Boeing Company from his own home base of Seattle to build a wide-bodied plane plant for the Soviets. The signing of the protocol, as the opposition noted, is a long way from final approval. But Jackson evoked a scary vision of not only Boeing but McDonnell-Douglas and Lockheed all emigrating to Russia.

Meany, who will soon be 80 years old, continues his iron domination of AFL-CIO policies. His trip is tightest in the foreign field, thanks in part to Jay Lovestone, the gray eminence presiding over the international affairs department. Of all the

No Sign Of Progress

Lincoln, Neb.

One of the reasons that the public should not listen to the pleas of Mr. Berger and the American Bar Association to upgrade judges by eliminating their running for office is that you get a judiciary entirely insulated from day-to-day affairs.

Such judges are given practically life tenure. They are not necessarily better than elected judges for this reason. Almost all judges, when they come up to the deciding point of law, call for briefs from the attorneys. An elected judge can do this just as well as the merit plan man. He can also read these briefs and make just as good decisions. Then why all this push for merit judges?

It is simply that judges do not like the expense of running for election every four years. Our system was intended as a revolution away from the English system. Under the Missouri Plan, the Nebraska Bar Association has made our system as it was under George III. It is retrogression, not progress, at all!

An Incentive To Stay

Lincoln, Neb.

Ecology is not such a big issue any more. It seems as if the word is seldom mentioned these days.

The City of Lincoln should hear the word again, though, for its own sake. The sooner the tearing up of streets and buildings is done and the reconstruction is completed, the better for the residents, and the tourists might actually stay longer than just overnight in a motel.

BARBARA WOERNER

The Playing Of Politics

Lincoln, Neb.

The governor has a lot of nerve to say that Tiemann is playing politics with the ruling on Interstate signs. He doesn't make the rules; he just enforces them.

The governor has been playing politics with the tourist department ever since he has been in office. Even had his portrait on sign boards. He is wasting state funds on tourism publicity when Nebraska has so little for travelers to stay here very long. Tourism would be about the same without publicity.

Talk about playing politics. The governor doesn't, by trying to give something to the elders, also getting a state building in Omaha. This would get him votes.

The Jackson-Meany Partnership

Sen. Henry Jackson

Impeaching Nixon would presumably serve another Meany objective. That is to harpoon the detente with the Soviet Union. This ties in with the drive to keep American jobs for Americans.

AFL-CIO backing for Sen. Vance Hartke's protectionist bill is one reason for the high tariff proposal, an echo of the depression years when an attempt was made to wall off the American economy, may pass. If jobs get scarcer with increasing unemployment, the pressure to protect American workers will build up.

In an election year it will be hard to argue against a measure that allegedly will save the American high wage economy.

The head Jackson is drawing on the presidency is not to be discounted. He is moving fast, one indication is being his statement that he would be happy to run on a ticket with Gov. George Wallace of Alabama as his vice president.

ON TARGET

By DON WALTON

You've read the tense and dramatic story of Seven Days in May.

Now comes Eight Days in June, a tale of confrontation and showdown — and, almost, of civil strife. Let it unfold.

Wednesday: The federal government announces that highway funds for Nebraska will be withheld unless the signs come down. Nebraska refuses.

Thursday: The knot tightens. The federals refuse to reconsider their decision. Articles of secession are prepared by a small group of state legislators in Nebraska. Storm clouds build.

Friday: The federals announce that they will send a contingent of U.S. marshals to Nebraska to take down the signs, thus putting an end to the impasse, and freeing highway construction funds for the state. The governor alerts the Nebraska National Guard to defend the state's borders. The Legislature rushes into special session to consider articles of secession. There is general outcry in the streets.

Saturday: The marshals gather in Council Bluffs. Across the river, National Guard troops man hastily constructed barriers. In Lincoln, the Legislature is in its second day of debate over procedural matters. "Give us a sign of your intent to cooperate," the federals were the governor. "Threats are not the road to tranquility," the governor responds.

Sunday: Federal reconnaissance planes swoop over Nebraska, photographing and mapping the landscape. Citizens are photographing in the streets with their fists held high. The Legislature decides to hold public hearings on the issue of secession. "Right on," wares the chairperson of the Daughters of the Confederacy. "We would rather secede than live under the boot of federal tyranny," an obscure legislator proclaims. "Leave the Union!" a U.S. senator scoffs. "I always wondered when Nebraska was going to join it."

Monday: Occupying a high bluff, the marshals scan the landscape across the river with binoculars, occasionally zeroing in on a Guardsman flashing them the state bird. Lines of volunteers appear at Guard armories, demanding weapons, bonuses and tuition money. "Dixie" jumps to the top of local radio charts, and Confederate flags fly from car radio antennas. Messages of support flow in from Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi and Cuba. State patrolmen are stationed at every tourist sign, now festooned with garlands and balloons. The populace engages in general revelry, with great absenteeism from places of work. In Omaha, a citizens committee discusses the possibility of separate statehood within the new nation of Nebraska, following the path earlier established by western Nebraska citizens who announced formation of the Principality of the Panhandle.

governed by Terry the First. The Omaha World-Herald urges caution, and is promptly sacked. In Lincoln, the Legislature is in recess, awaiting the date of its public hearing, now scheduled for Devaney Bowl. At nightfall, a jet lands at Lincoln's Municipal Airport, and its passenger disappears into the dark.

Tuesday: At dawn, the jet rushes off to Omaha, where a curtained limousine takes its passenger across the river to Council Bluffs. Meanwhile, in Nebraska, citizens parade through small communities, carrying pitchforks, baseball bats and slingshots. Bands march through the streets, sustaining the frenzy. "The feds are oppressive," they chant. "The feds are obnoxious." Awaiting the date of their public hearing on secession, state senators gather for a brief session, proposing a constitutional amendment to allow Nebraska to negotiate treaties with foreign nations, institute tariffs at its borders, seek foreign aid from the Soviet Union and increase legislative salaries. The jet returns from Omaha to Lincoln. The Congress issues a blunt warning that further rebellion will not be tolerated, and the White House pleads for "cooperative brotherhood." Civil defense teams sweep out the shelters, and the jet hops back to Omaha. As tensions rise, the governor schedules an evening press conference.

Wednesday: The sun shines brightly over the peaceful land. Details of the peace agreement fill the local newspapers. The marshals are falling back to Des Moines, leaving western Iowa as a demilitarized free zone. Nebraska Guardsmen return to their regular jobs, but their units remain in a state of readiness. The exchange of prisoners is quickly arranged; the marshals return a Guardsman apprehended on an unauthorized trip to Carter Lake a few nights earlier, and the Guard returns three mailmen and a federal agricultural official they captured the night before. Meanwhile, work begins on attaching the tourist information to regular highway signs. Near Lincoln, one sign proclaims "55MPH to Lincoln, State Capitol," and another outside Omaha announces "Soft Shoulders at Omaha, Night Life." Out west, another states: "Slippery When Wet at Ogallala, Lake McCongary." And in Washington, Henry Kissinger holds a news conference. "These were among the most delicate negotiations in my experience," he explains. "When emotions run high, the task is more difficult. And emotions always run highest among brothers. But I am sure this agreement will usher in a new era of peace and understanding in this part of the world." At the White House, Ron Ziegler announces that the President would leave later in the month on a goodwill trip to Lincoln and Council Bluffs.

MIKE ROYKO

Specter Of The Quota

CHICAGO — There have been many books and movies recently about the excitement and thrills of being a big-city policeman.

Richard Bollman, 34, has to laugh when he sees them, considering his experience while a Chicago cop.

Bollman was a cop for seven years. During the first few years, he found it interesting and even satisfying. He delivered four babies, arrested some criminals, and received a few honorable mentions for nicely done work.

Then he was put on a three-wheel motorcycle and shipped up to the far north side of the city as a traffic man.

His assignment was to write parking tickets. In the beginning, he was given a quota of 40 tickets a day. The police department sometimes denies that it sets quotas, but it always has. Parking tickets are a big source of city revenue.

A cop writing 40 tickets a day can generate $30,000 a year in fines.

Bollman had to hustle to make his quota.

"If I didn't make it, you got no favors. Once I asked if I could be taken off a parade assignment for personal reasons. The captain pulled my file and said: 'You are not bringing in the tickets. There are no favors if you don't bring in the tickets.'"

"So I became a louse. I used to park my wheel on a side street, so the merchants and shoppers couldn't hear me coming."

"Then I'd sneak up on cars and write the ticket. If I was at a car and somebody was running out of the store with a nickel for the meter, I still had to write it. Boy, did they hate me!"

Before long, Bollman's quota was 70 tickets a day. (One cop, writing that many tickets a day, generates more than $54,000 a year in revenue.)

Trying to keep up, Bollman started pre-writing tickets at home at night, skipping lunch and becoming even sneakier. He pounced the instant the red flag went up.

But he couldn't make the 70 quota. "When I'd fall behind they'd ask me if I wanted to walk a beat in one of the housing projects, or go out to O'Hare Field and watch airplanes."

"Sometimes parking meters broke down. I couldn't write tickets when that happened. But the captain would tell me: 'Don't worry about broken meters. Must write the tickets. It's not your job to check to see if meters work."

So he wrote tickets on cars at broken meters.

"One day I complained about the fact that the radio on my bike didn't work. I said, what if somebody needs help, or there's a robbery in progress call? They said: 'That's none of your business. You're business is to write tickets.'"

It became a fierce battle of wits between Bollman and the neighborhood merchants.

"The merchants would send one of their employees out to the meters and put in the money. They consider it part of their business to do that for their customers."

"When I pounced on a meter, they would scream out the doors at me."

Still, Bollman wouldn't manage his quota. "The best I could do was 35 or 40 a day."

Then one day he was called in by the chief of traffic and his resignation was demanded.

He was accused of writing phonies, making out tickets for non-existent cars.

"I told them I hadn't done it. But they told me if I didn't resign, they'd have me indicted. I told them I wouldn't resign."

So he was indicted. And while he awaited trial, he was sent to work in the Loop (downtown), directing traffic.

"They gave me a quota there, too."

Before he went on trial, though, he was suspended from the department.

When the trial was held, Bollman was acquitted. He has since tried to get his police job back — hoping that he might be asked to catch criminals instead of write tickets — but he hasn't been successful.

"If I did anything wrong, it was because I did what they told me to do. I didn't want to be a louse. But that's the way they want it. And meanwhile, the murder rate goes up and up."

NEW YORK — If ever you had any doubts that the American animal is a stubborn mule, look around you on the highways. He's going like 60 again.

Miles an hour, that is. And with maybe one eye out for the police, which makes him even more dangerous as he zips past us squares holding to a legal 55.

Legal — and safe. Because it's official now: Highway fatalities are the lowest they've been since Henry invented the flivver and put us all at the mercy of the nut behind the steering wheel.

Traffic mileage deaths in the first four months of 1974 dipped to 3.4 per 100 million miles traveled. Last year the figure was 4.2. That's 24% fewer fatalities than in the same period a year ago, a reduction from 16,500 to 12,490.

What these statistics really mean is that 4,020 more people are alive today, thanks to the 55-mile speed limit and the winter gas shortage. In April alone, the energy crisis saved 1,060 lives.

And yet, on a recent trip, we plugged along at 55 and avoided highway hypnosis by counting drivers who whizzed past impatiently. After a while the total got so high even that became hypnotic.

Maybe it's because gas isn't a problem any more. Maybe it's because the summer weather sends people scurrying to beaches and lakes and mountains. Or because the American vacationer has always considered it his Constitutional duty to make 800 miles a day.

Whatever it is, he's edging back to his old highway habits, and the gasoline folks are already getting skittish about making it through to Labor Day.

Now and then they make their prices, which makes most drivers mad. Right after they tell the man to "fill 'er up."

That's another thing Fast driving costs a lot more than the expensive gas it guzzles. Putting people and automobiles back together after an accident takes money. $4.6 billion in the first four months of 1973. Slower speeds in the same period this year reduced hospital and repair bills to $4.1 billion.

Injuries went down, too, from 570,000 to 440,000. But if you can't get to a speeder through the pocketbook, don't expect to hit him in the heart.

In fact, if our mulish driver won't buckle his seat belt... doesn't care how much it costs to get there 40 minutes faster... and probably doesn't know (or care) how many lives are saved by slower speeds, it kind of makes you wonder whatever do you have to do to get his attention?

Now we are heading into one of the most dangerous holidays of all, the four-day Fourth of July weekend. And the National Safety Council says Americans will drive 15 billion miles from sundown, July 3, to midnight, July 7.

So how many won't make it home safely? Well, the Council is optimistic. If everybody keeps to the legal limit, it expects "only" 450 to 550 people to die in traffic accidents and from 19,000 to 24,000 to suffer disabling injuries.

So keep your fingers crossed... and your speedometer needle at 55. You might be a few minutes late to the picnic, but a lukewarm hot dog is still more fun than a funeral.

Fireman Tradition Survives 50 Years In Bee

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau
 Bee — In 1924, movies would have us believe, the whole country were double-breasted suits, fur coats and strings of pearls; flirted, danced the Charleston and drank gin out of pocket flasks.

Flappers, flivvers and jazz set the style. Jay Gatsby was slowly working his way back into Daisy Buchanan's tinsel heart.

Not in Bee.
 Here volunteer firemen were organizing a home-style community picnic to help bolster their $4 treasury.

The First Bee Volunteer Firemen's Picnic featured less chic but equally lusty entertainment — such as water fights, potato races, boxing matches and beer drinking.

Bee residents indulged Saturday and Sunday in a fit of nostalgia all their own, celebrating a 50-year tradition by throwing a big summer picnic to finance the fire department.

Gearing up well in advance to feed a lot of hungry people, the Bee Volunteer Fire Dept. (BVFD) served pancakes and sausage for breakfast Sunday and barbecued pork for lunch.

The meals were served in the Bee Fire Hall, purchased with earnings from earlier picnics.

Firemen like Emil and Lou K. Polisky marked the 50th observance of the event with eight weeks' growth of beard. Without the gold glitter sprinkled in Lou's salt and pepper whiskers, it might have been difficult to tell the two fire-fighting brothers apart.

The Adolph Nemetz Czech band played polkas from a flatbed truck on Main Street, their brassy sound broadcast live over radio station KGMT.

Meanwhile, the East Butler High School Band vied for the public's attention with a concert in a vacant lot across the street.

The grand parade at 5 p.m. was followed by water fights — one for 10-year-old firemen, the

New Hospital Dedicated; Jet Health Care Urged

McCook (AP) — Jet health care is needed by small towns, said Dr. Claude Organ Sunday at the dedication of Community Hospital.

Dr. Organ, chairman of the Department of Surgery at Creighton University, said modern care is needed for rural communities that don't have jet air service.

Dr. Organ also said people have a responsibility to know more about their health and to ask about it. He said the small towns should make their case to the federal government to share in federal funds.

The 56-bed hospital is located on the northeast outskirts of town.

Also speaking at the dedication was Nebraska Sen. Carl Curtis and Mrs. Curtis cut the dedication ribbon.

Funds for the hospital came through a fund solicitation from the public, Hill-Burton funds and a grant from the Barnett family.

Supercrowd Attends Four-Day Gem Show

An estimated 50,000 to 55,000 rockhounds, beauty lovers and curious visitors flocked to the "gem" of a show which ended Sunday at the State Fairgrounds, according to publicity chairman Marie Wells.

The four-day National Gem & Mineral Show generated a "fantastic turnout . . . far more than I had expected," MRS. Wells said. Her pre-show estimate of 45,000 visitors was a goal she admitted she really hadn't expected to reach.

Out-of-state attendance particularly was surprising, she added. One visitor noticed cars bearing license plates from South Carolina, Florida, California and British Columbia.

And despite the fact that Sunday was the last day, Mrs. Wells said attendance was not lagging.

"The morning was a little light, probably because of church, but this afternoon it's just like the State Fair," she said.

Enthusiasts trying to view the show's many facets Saturday afternoon had to wait as long as 20 minutes to get inside the fairgrounds, according to one account.

While the show's exhibits pleased thousands of Nebraskans, Nebraska pleased the exhibitors, Mrs. Wells said.

"Everyone seems to be so happy with Nebraska and its weather," she said. "At first I think they were afraid they'd be stuck in a mudhole."

Sunday's schedule included a morning worship service and several symposiums.

At Saturday night's awards banquet, Frank Krejci of the Lincoln Gem & Mineral Club won the American Federation of Mineralogical Societies' award for faceting. A total of 29 awards were given.

Mrs. Wells said she thought the show would boost not only interest in the subject, but also would increase membership in gem and mineral organizations over the U.S.

"They (visitors) just can't believe the beauty that comes out of the earth. You couldn't begin to see it all in one day," she said.

For those who didn't see enough this year, they can attend in 1975, when the show moves on to Denver.

Ministers Ask Probe Of Killings

Omaha (AP) — Members of the Omaha Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance who attended a meeting Saturday night voted to join in a call for a grand jury investigation of two shooting incidents involving police and blacks.

State Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha, a black, has made the same request.

In one incident, Elza Carr Jr., a black, and Patrolman Paul Nields, a white, were killed in a shootout June 6. Annie Worlds, a black, was wounded when she was arrested in the crowd outside the house after Carr's death.

In another incident, Henry C. Holmes, a black, was fatally wounded by a white policeman on the porch of Holmes' home June 9 after an exchange of shots.

The Rev. James Allen, education committee chairman of the predominantly black alliance, said the ministers also would like a grand jury to investigate any other matters "pertinent to police minority relationships."

He said the alliance has about 75 members, about 25 of whom attended the meeting.

Last Rites Held For Man Killed By Patrolman

Omaha (AP) — More than 300 persons attended funeral services at St. Paul Baptist Church Saturday for Henry C. Holmes, 41, fatally wounded a week ago in an exchange of shots with an Omaha policeman.

A 50-car procession accompanied the hearse bearing Holmes' body to Mt. Hope Cemetery.

Holmes, a machine operator for Allied Mills Inc., was a native of Clarksville, Okla. He moved to Omaha about 16 years ago.

The shooting incident involving Holmes, a black, and Patrolman John Patrick Car Jr., who is white, occurred early June 9 in front of Holmes' house. Car said he had attempted to question Holmes.

Holmes is survived by his widow, stepmother, two daughters, a son, four sisters, four brothers and four grandchildren.

Young Campers Study Land Use, Range Livestock

Halsey (AP) — About 50 young Nebraskans will attend the 1974 Range Youth Camp at the State 4-H Camp at Halsey Monday through Friday.

The camp is an annual event for 4-H youth aged 14 to 19. Spokesmen say the educational part of the camp is aimed at giving the young people a practical knowledge of plant-soil relationship, range livestock, ranching, multiple use of land and economics.

A range judging contest will highlight the program Thursday.

17th Century Painting Stolen

Jacksonville, Fla. (AP) — A painting by 17th century Flemish artist Anthony Vandyke was stolen from the Cummer Gallery of Art, police said Sunday.

The spokesman said the 8-by-11-inch oil on wood, a portrait of Vandyke's teacher, Hendrik van Balen, was stolen during visiting hours Saturday.

Water Fight, Toe Painting End Week

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

A woman had just finished filling a bucket with water.

As she walked along, seemingly hundreds of screaming girls swarmed around her, cups waving wildly in the air.

No, it wasn't a scene portraying the daily ration of water for unfortunates stranded in the desert.

Rather, it was one of a half-dozen separate activities reserved for the Girl Scout day camp finale at Wilderness Park.

The hundreds of Brownies, hot and weary from a week packed with a variety of day camp activities, readily indulged in a friendly water fight.

And what a day it was for a water fight!

No one minded being drenched. And the leaders even got in on the act. One stood by patiently as Brownies hoisted the metal bucket over head, then gleefully dumped the cold water over her head and down her back.

"We started out with 200 water balloons" for playing catch, explained another leader. But the balloons were too easily broken, so the girls were allowed to indulge in the full-fledged water fight.

There were other all-camp activities.

The Brownies made "works of art" or useful items from scraps and throw-aways.

They were captured by "pirates and Indians" and were lead on an obstacle course.

They indulged in "crazy painting" using feet, toes, noses, even hair — fingers only as a last resort — as paint brushes.

They played a game called "the loose caboose."

And they participated in a "beauty toe contest," decorating their toes with fingernail polish, cotton balls, lipstick, decorator yarn and felt-tipped pens. Some of the toes had faces, others were striped like stockings, others were painted in psychedelic colors — and all were entered in the contest.

All week long, the scouts made friends and took part in the day camp's generally unstructured programs, selecting from such activities as archery, gymnastics, constructing sand castles and much, much more.

More Brownies participated in this year's day camp sessions than ever before. More than 230 were enrolled in the first session; 219 took part in the second; and 90 attended the twilight session. Seventy adults assisted with the Lincoln day camp activities at Wilderness Park.

Wife Swapping Is Revolting To Her

DEAR ABBY: Quite some time ago my husband asked me how I felt about wife swapping. I told him I hoped he was kidding because the thought of it made me sick. The subject was dropped.

The next thing I knew, Pete started bringing home some of those crummy underground newspapers and reading ads from couples who wanted to swap. I told him if he decided to go in for anything so lowdown he had better find himself another wife.

I then went out of town for some dental surgery. I was gone for five days. When I returned Pete told me that "just for the fun of it" he had looked up a few couples who had advertised themselves as swingers, and he thought it might be fun if we tried it.

Abby, the idea is absolutely revolting to me. My moral upbringing wouldn't permit me to do anything so vile. We've been married for 33 years and I can't imagine what's gotten into him.

Pete says times have changed, and everybody swings. I can't believe that. Please tell me, Abby. Am I out of step or is he?

BEWILDERED

DEAR BEWILDERED: He is. Don't let him kid you. It's a new name for a very old game in which everybody loses. Ask your husband how he'd like to swing around to his doctor's for a checkup — from the neck both ways. He could be sick.

ABBY: My husband and I go around with another young married couple who have been getting on our nerves lately because of something they do which we dislike.

They are always talking about how much money they make, how much their clothes cost them, how much they spent on their vacations, and they even bragged about how much they got back on their income tax. It's sickening.

What do you do about people like that without breaking up the freindship?

HATES BRAGGING

DEAR HATES: I would see a lot less of them. But if you don't want to break up the freindship (this is a freindship?) tell them in a friendly tone that their constant talk about money is boring, so to please soft pedal it. And if you should lose their freindship, you'll not have lost much.

DEAR ABBY: To that woman who scouted all the churches in town in search of a man and finally found one, you said, "Some people go to church to pray," — after which I thought you were going to add, "—some people go to church to prey."

ARDYTH ULLMAN

DEAR ARDYTH: Had I thought of it, I might have.

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to Happy in Houston, "Some people go to church to pray — others go to pray they meet someone," set me thinking about the other reasons people may have for going to church.

Here is a list, which I think is complete:

1. Habit.
2. Training.
3. Fear of punishment from the Lord if they don't go.
4. To see who else is there.
5. To be seen.
6. To get spiritual inspiration.
7. To socialize.

Notice, Abby, I did not put down "to pray." One can pray anywhere.

PRAYS A LOT

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter-in-law steals things from our home. Before we put locks on all our doors and windows, steaks and other food disappeared from our freezer. Our son (her husband) mentioned casually that they were having steaks so often he was tired of them. In the spring about half of my canned fruit disappeared from my basement fruit room. Their daughter (age 10) said: "It seems like we have just as much fruit as when you canned last summer." Her mother blushed and tried to shush her up.

We spoke to our pastor about this, and he said he thinks our son knows his wife takes these things, but that he's trying to cover up for her. That's hard for me to believe. Our son wasn't raised that way.

The last straw was when they were here for Sunday supper and my daughter-in-law was helping me with the dishes afterwards. She kept hanging around the silverware drawer. After she left, I noticed three forks and four spoons were missing.

I am praying constantly for this girl. How can I help her? She can't be right in the head.

WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Between prayers, have a talk with your son. You are wise and compassionate to realize that something is wrong with a woman. She needs to be examined by a doctor.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Cal. 90212, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Wall To Head TAFY

Milan Wall, regional planning coordinator for the S-U-N (State University of Nebraska) Project, was elected president for 1974-75 of Theatre Arts For Youth (TAFY) at that organization's recent annual meeting.

The TAFY board of directors elected Phil Kay, chairman of the speech and drama department at Nebraska Wesleyan University, as vice president.

Also at the meeting, June Moore and Tom Poggemeyer were re-elected secretary and treasurer, respectively; and Ann Calhoun, Carren Miller, Sally Davidson, Judy Hope and Art Thompson were named as new board members.

The board also discussed seeking indications from other performing arts organizations about their interest in co-sponsoring programs for children in the Lincoln area.

The TAFY budget of $3,000 for the 1974-75 season was tentatively approved.

Miss Sarah Hillman Earns Wohelo Medallion

The Wohelo Medallion, the highest award any Camp Fire Girl can earn, will be presented Tuesday to Sarah Hillman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hillman.

Sarah, a Horizon Club member and spring graduate of Lincoln High School, spent two years working on the award, an individual and personal project.

Only 14 other Camp Fire Girls associated with the Lincoln Council have earned the Wohelo Medallion.

Among its requirements are ability to relate to others, an understanding of leadership and one's place in society, looking to the future and establishing goals, as well as meeting occasionally with a committee of adult advisors.

And she isn't the only member of her family involved in the organization. Her three sisters also have been Camp Fire Girls and her mother is on the Lincoln Council's board of directors, serving as chairman of the program committee.

Sarah has been an active in Camp Fire Girl for 11 years.

South zoomed right into seven. This naturally surprised West, who of course realized it was possible that either or both of his minor suit aces might go to sleep — but could not imagine how his ace of trumps could get lost in the shuffle.

So West doubled — which pleased East mightily, since he had an ace that his partner knew nothing about. South eventually went down three, or 500 points.

This contrasted greatly with the outcome at the other table where the Brazilian North-South pair bid and made four hearts, for 420 points, on the following sequence:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♥	Pass	2 ♥
Pass	4 ♥	Pass

WEIGHT WATCHERS®

POSTCARD

by

Stan Delaplaine

It seems only yesterday — it WAS only yesterday — that I communicated with my fellow-man with cat's whiskers.

We made our own radio. We called them "wireless" sets. Though heaven knows they were full of wire.

We wound copper wire on a Quaker Oats carton. Put a brass rod with sliders on top — that was the turning device. Put in a condenser. Hooked up a piece of galena crystal in a metal cup. Then we adjusted a cat's whisker piece of wire and searched for the sensitive spot on the galena. The earphones hissing softly in our ears.

We communicated at Boy Scout camps with semaphore flags. We learned code — dit dah dit.

We blazed trees. "Water nearby." Put rock on rock. "Trail starts here." Learned to build smoky fires. "I am lost."

What is all this knowledge put to?

"London is calling," says the operator. "God ahead, please." Hello, deh!

A phone call came in from London this morning. Probably by satellite — this is a communicating generation. (Our cat, Hell, communicated with a neighborhood tom name of Whitefoot. The result was five kittens who are all over the place.)

Press agents used to mail information. Now they send it by something called "Mail-o-gram."

It used to be by yellow Western Union. But Old Yellow has been phased out. The last singing telegram was sent the other day. "Happy Birthday to you."

Tempus fugit. Not many of us singing cats left anymore.

Some years ago, there was an International Conference on the Origin of Life. It was held in Moscow.

While conferring, in came a telegram from Junagadh, India: "Life under laboratory conditions created. Initial success. Further experiments on hand."

It was signed: "Layji Bhai Patel."

The interesting thing about this is the economy of words. I count this at 14 words with punctuation. It left Layji Bhai Patel with one unused word — of Western Union's allowance then — of fifteen.

Why didn't he use it? The usual fifteenth word was "love." He could have said: "Eureka!" Or, "Wow!" But he did not.

A most interesting communicator (before TV too) is the American antelope. The antelope is equipped with a curious signaling device. When he is alarmed, he expands in the area of his pistol pockets.

This area is white fur. In his alarm, the antelope blows up like a white balloon.

And all across the Great Plains, from the Platte River to the Wind River mountains, antelopes expand in the seat of their pants. Signalling each other, "Get up and GET!"

This is true wireless communication. A challenge to the wireless press agent. Older than satellite phone calls. The antelope was sending messages before Samuel Morse.

London calling.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SIDNEY OMARR

Forecast for Monday

Gemini who is most like her sign: Susan Siroberg. Gemini who looks most like Cancer: Jane Russell. Leo most like her sign: Mae West. The Aries faces: Karl Malden and Chuck Connors. The Taurus sign: Joe Louis, Brooks Robinson, John Umlas, Pancho Gonzales and Ken Venturi. The Scorpio look: Lee Grant, Hedy Lamarr, Richard Burton and Burt Lancaster. These are some of my "zodiac people." Do you have any?

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Check accounts, resources. Long-range money commitment may not be wise. You may not have all facts concerning condominium, home, property, business. Get in touch with one who does know — expert money advice is required.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lunar cycle is high; your judgment, intuition are apt to be on target. Take initiative; be independent in thought, action. Improve appearance. Steer clear of relative, neighbor who wants to bicker, nitpick and create nuisance situation. Trip may be temporarily delayed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What you seek may cost money. Know it and don't expect something of value for nothing. Aquarian could play significant role. Look behind scenes. Clandestine meeting could be on agenda. You may be called upon to teach special technique.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't rush to judgment. Examine various methods, possibilities. Accent is on romance, friends, gains from professional endeavors. Gemini, Sagittarius individuals could figure prominently. You are called back to repeat a lesson, chore, special project.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Refuse to be discouraged by "wet blanket." Handle details — don't delegate duties. One in authority wants to do some reviewing, remodeling. Be co-operative, frank — and imprint your own style. You could be due for promotion.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Someone appears ready to renege on promise. Have alternative plan at hand. See situation in light of reality. Feelings are sensitive; you could be called upon as peacemaker. Travel, communication, publishing — these areas are spotlighted. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Partnership proposal, joint effort may be delayed. Family affairs tend to command more attention than usual. Negative response could be forthcoming via call, letter. Advertising appropriation hits snag. Be diplomatic — win your way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Lie low. Do more listening than usual. Be a keen observer. Take special care with important papers, legal documents. Check correspondence, calls. Financial affairs need "breather." Time works for you — play waiting game.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Practicality, responsibility dominate. Flash, sensationalism will not suffice. Instead, steady pace is necessary and so is careful organization. Gain co-operation of associates, coworkers, those who share concerns, interests and goals. Capricorn figures prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): What appears a completed transaction may, in actuality, be only the beginning. Means be ready to review, revise and to find better means of distribution. Aries, Sagittarius and Libra individuals are likely to be in picture. Relationship is put to test.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Study Sagittarius message for valid hint. You should avoid trying to skip over essentials. Attend to details. Check diet. Digestion is apt to "act up." Know it and don't invite difficulty. Moderation, common sense should rule.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You get going with ideas, short trips, messages. You share by teaching, learning. You are restless because you are in the midst of creative activity. Member of opposite sex is protective, not necessarily in love. See situation in mature manner.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you know what you want and how to go about obtaining it. You may fool yourself, but it is difficult for others to pull fast one on you. This is one of your most important years and September should be the most significant month of 1974. If single, marriage is indicated. Married or single, you have more responsibility, could go into business for yourself.

Survey: Most Americans Against Nixon Trip

By LOUIS HARRIS

By 52-35%, a majority of the American people believes that President Nixon should not be taking a trip to Russia to negotiate new agreements with the Russians "while the House of Representatives is considering a vote on his impeachment." By a comparable 51-36%, a majority also opposed Nixon's current Middle East trip.

Basically, if it comes down to it, the American people want to see President Nixon give top priority to facing the charges over Watergate and other alleged counts on which he might be impeached, rather than traveling abroad at this time.

By 46-39%, a plurality of the public agrees with the statement that he is "using the trips abroad as a grandstand play to prevent Congress from impeaching and removing him from office."

The public is basically split on two other latent worries about the upcoming Nixon trip to Russia. By a narrow 42-38%, a plurality agrees that "in his weakened position at home, he would be too tempted to give away too much just to bring back a peace agreement."

However, by 44-38%, the public does not believe that the President "might be tempted to escalate a crisis abroad into a national emergency in order to stop the impeachment proceedings against him at home."

These public doubts and concerns all add up to a clear majority which feels quite strongly that these latest presidential trips abroad are mistimed and ill-advised.

At the same time, the American people give a solid endorsement of the basic direction of the Nixon-Kissinger foreign policy: Nixon is given positive marks of 65-33% on "working for peace in the world." 59-34% on "handling relations with Russia," and 48-45% on "handling the Middle East crisis."

Louis Harris Should Face Charges

And, significantly, by a lopsided 68-21% margin, the public also agrees that "if president Nixon can get agreements with foreign countries, he should do so for the good of our country regardless of the state of the impeachment proceedings." And by an even higher 79 to 10%, a majority feels that "it is important to maintain continuity in progress toward peace for the next President to pick up, whether Nixon is impeached or not."

The American people do not want Nixon to drop foreign policy matters while the impeachment proceedings are underway. But a key element in the public's thinking is that President Nixon does not have to travel abroad in order to make progress on international relations.

Confidence High

The reason: public confidence in Secretary of State Henry Kissinger stands at a record 85-10% good-excellent rating, the highest ever recorded for an official of the federal government. The prevailing feeling is that Secretary Kissinger can do the traveling and even most of the basic negotiating.

These foreign trips are widely seen by the American people as an effort by President Nixon to put his strongest case forward for justifying his remaining in office: his successes in foreign policy.

The people do not object to his trying this tack. By 68-17%, a majority agrees that "he has the right to present his strongest case for keeping himself in office, and foreign policy is his strongest area."

In the past, before the days when the President was laboring under the clouds of Watergate and other charges, a trip abroad was an almost sure-fire bet to produce more favorable ratings from the public.

Now, however, Mr. Nixon is taking a high gamble on these current trips to the Middle East and to Russia. For most Americans see the forays as a ploy to improve his position on the impeachment proceedings, and that is a trade-off which the people say they just will not buy.

Some States Preparing To Compete Head-To-Head With Bookies

Troy, Mich. — The country's state-run lotteries are barely out of the infant stage. But already they are becoming involved in struggles with the underworld and the federal government over how the nation's gambling action and profits are to be divided.

Faced in some cases with disappointing revenues that have failed to match rosy expectations, the state lotteries are continually having to devise new games to restore excitement for a fickle clientele that quickly becomes bored. In this effort to add more spice to the game, officials in some states are preparing to compete head-to-head with illegal bookmakers.

Not Far Off

As a result, the day of state-run numbers, punchboard and sports-pool betting operations appear not far off, and in isolated instances is already here.

Originally the lotteries were not designed, and clearly unable, to make much of a dent in the illegal gambling trade. Their purpose was simply to produce revenue. But now there has been a deliberate broadening of purpose.

At least three states, New Jersey, Delaware and Massachusetts, have made competition with illegal gambling a major objective in itself, along with the generation of revenue. Other states are expected to follow.

There is ground for "reasonable hope" that the lotteries can cut significantly into the illegal gambling trade, Edward Powers, president of the National Association of State Lotteries, said during the annual meeting of that organization here last week.

Whether Powers' hopes are to be realized is viewed as problematical. And even while the state lotteries begin to lay such bold and hopeful plans, they find themselves facing proposed federal action which, if carried out, would skim off some of the states' lottery profits for the federal treasury.

Specifically, the Internal Revenue Service proposes to place a 10% excise tax on the states' lottery profits. Those profits amounted to $700 million last year. The IRS also would require the thousands of sellers of lottery tickets to buy $50 lottery stamps annually.

Further, Secretary of the Treasury William Simon has proposed to Congress that 20% of all lottery prizes over $100 be withheld from winners for income-tax purposes.

Disadvantage

All of this, lottery officials believe, would seriously inhibit or cripple their enterprises, place them at a disadvantage in relation to illegal gambling, and reduce state revenues.

To Powers and others the situation involves a fundamental question of state sovereignty.

"We're about to find out how sovereign the sovereign states really are," he said. The state lottery directors are opposing Simon's proposal, and on June 25 they are to meet with IRS officials in Washington to argue the excise-tax and gambling-stamp questions.

Meanwhile, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., said Friday that he would introduce a bill exempting the state lotteries from federal taxation.

Since New Hampshire established the first state lottery 10 years ago, eight other states have followed, most of them in the last 18 months. New York's lottery started in 1967; New Jersey's in 1971; Connecticut's, Massachusetts', Michigan's and Pennsylvania's in 1972; Maryland's in 1973, and Rhode Island's this year.

Four more legal lotteries are to begin operating soon — in Illinois, Ohio and Maine this summer, and in Delaware later this year or in early 1975.

Success?

The success of the lotteries to date is viewed as mixed. Some, as in the case of Michigan, have exceeded original estimates as to how much revenue would be produced. But in some of the older lottery states, there is a growing feeling that the lotteries in their present form may never be the great revenue producers that had been hoped for.

In New York, for example, there were predictions that profits would average $1 million a day. But in the first nine months of the 1973-74 fiscal year, they amounted to only $42.5 million. The full year's total is expected to be about $50 million. By contrast, motor vehicle fees in New York will bring in an estimated $251 million, the cigarette tax $360 million and the liquor levy $158 million.

Some lottery directors complain that federal laws forbidding the sending of lottery information through the mails and advertising lotteries on radio and television have had an inhibiting effect. There are bills in Congress to change this, but no early action is expected on either them or the tax-exemption legislation. This is partially because of Congress's preoccupation with presidential impeachment.

But to other directors, the nature of the games themselves has been the biggest drawback. The public tends to get bored with weekly lottery drawings, it is said.

New Twists

So, increasingly, lottery directors have been forced to devise more and more new twists. First there were special "overlay" games — Christmas and Fourth of July drawings, for instance. Then the million-dollar winners. Then the "loser's lotteries," wherein losing players get a chance at a new prize. Then vacation trips as prizes, and automobiles, and annuities, and scholarships. Typically after each new feature was introduced public interest would surge only to ease off gradually again.

It is the feeling of many that the lotteries will reach their full potential — and achieve their new objective of cutting in on illegal gambling activities — only by making their games more and more like the illegal ones.

One step was that of the daily lottery. Several states are considering it, but so far New Jersey is the only one to adopt it on a regular basis. New York is planning a temporary, 24-day daily lottery next month.

New Jersey officials, however, say that the daily lottery there has fallen far short of its initial sales projection of 500,000 tickets a day.

Other states are looking into pick-your-own-number games.

Instant Game

Immediate payoff is the major feature of Massachusetts' "instant game," which began on May 29. This is a variation of the old illegal "punchboard" game. In it, a player buys a ticket and rubs a gummed covering substance off a series of five numbers on the ticket. If two or more of the numbers match, the player wins a prize of up to $10,000. The player learns immediately if he is a winner, and the payoff is made the same day or the next, as in the case of illegal numbers or punchboard bets.

The game has proved so attractive that some Boston ticket sellers complain that they cannot carry on their regular business because of the lottery crowds.

Further down the line is sports-pool betting. At least one state, Delaware, is making plans to institute this means of direct competition for the bookmaker's dollar. The details of the plan are not yet settled, but it would involve picking the winners of football, baseball and basketball games.

Nixon Aid To Elderly Programs Political, Says Report

Washington — White House efforts on behalf of President Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign included an extensive plan to politicize programs to aid the elderly, according to a Senate Watergate Committee staff report.

The major effort cited was a plan to fund an organization created by the White House to help attract support from among the elderly.

In the process, White House officials pressured federal agencies to cut the funds of two long-time advocate agencies for the elderly, groups considered "enemies" of the President, according to the report.

Nearly 20 pages of the more than 150-page draft report were devoted to detailing these aims. The report has not been made public, but a copy was made available to the New York Times.

The report described what the staff called a "civil and criminal conspiracy" to divert to political use funds appropriated by Congress for social and economic programs for special groups, such as minorities, the poor, the elderly and veterans.

The report said that the plan also included the use of certain administration officials and supporters, such as then Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson and Arthur S. Flemming, now the Chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, in television commercials, and the printing of brochures aimed at the aged, all at public expense.

Further, documents quoted in the report showed that $263,000 was spent on various brochures and publications, ostensibly depicting what the President had done for the elderly, but which were clearly political in nature, the staff said. On the other hand, a television commercial with Richardson and Flemming as participants was not used because of its poor quality.

"The evidence the committee has gathered indicates that federal resources were employed to secure the support of older Americans," the report stated. "Various documents obtained by the select committee also indicate that government brochures were prepared for political purposes."

Regarding the federation of experienced Americans, the report said that the office of Economic Opportunity was ordered to provide $400,000 to fund the federation, "which was created on March 29, 1972, on White House initiative."

The federation was awarded a contract of $1.5 million by the Labor Department three months after the organization was set up, purportedly to train and provide work for 350 poor elderly, the report said. The OEO grant, of $399,339, was made later in the year ostensibly for the federation to deal with problems of the Spanish-speaking elderly poor.

The report quoted an audit by the General Accounting Office that said the two grants "were processed outside normal procedures" and with "substantial White House backing."

In addition, the report said that the White House wanted to cut back and eventually terminate federal funding of the National Council on Aging and the National Council of Senior Citizens. The funds of the two groups, "considered 'enemies' of the White House, were not ended but were reduced substantially," the report stated.

Listed in the report as participating in the plan to politicize programs for the elderly were Daniel Todd, Director of the Older American Voter Group of the Committee for the Re-election of the President; Desmond Barker and L. J. Evans, White House aides, and Frederic V. Malek, now the Deputy Director of the Office of Management and Budget.

All of the men have denied repeatedly that they were involved in a plan to politicize the programs.

Alleged Pacific Test Protested

Canberra, Australia (UPI) — Prime Minister Gough Whitlam said France apparently set off a nuclear device in the Pacific early Monday. He called it "regrettable," and New Zealand said it was registering an official protest.

In Paris, a French defense ministry spokesman said there was nothing to announce on the nuclear tests.

"I am not informed on this subject; I have nothing to say," the spokesman said.

"The Australian government has reason to believe that France exploded a nuclear weapon device in the atmosphere over Mururoa Atoll this morning," Whitlam said in a statement released to the press.

"It was a matter of deep concern to the Australian government and people that France is proceeding to yet another program of nuclear testing in the Pacific."

"The test was likely to lead to deposits of radioactive fallout within Australian territory," Whitlam said. "The feelings of the Australian government and people had been made known in the past and nothing had changed in these feelings since last year."

"It was more regrettable," said Whitlam, "that the test had been made under a new French government."

BEATRICE

'Outsider' Irwin Captures U.S. Open Title

Former Colorado Footballer Shoots 287

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — Hale Irwin, an outsider, had just made two consecutive bogeys.

Then he stood over a 12-foot putt to save par—and win golf's greatest prize, the U.S. Open Championship—on the 17th hole at the Winged Foot Golf Club Sunday. If he missed, it would be three bogeys in a row and he would be in trouble.

"I was thinking, 'Get me out of this track,'" he said later.

He made the putt.

"That won the tournament," he said. "It was a very big putt, my best putt of the tournament. It had a left-to-right break on it and it was dead in the heart of the cup."

It sent Irwin, who had quickstepped over the shattered dreams of the game's Big Three—Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player—to the 18th with a secure, two-shot advantage.

He made a solid par there, finished his scrambling, struggling, straining round with three-over-par 73 and took the title with the highest winning score in more than a decade.

His total was a whopping 287, seven over par.

The soft-spoken, articulate, intelligent young man who has just moved from Colorado to St. Louis, turned professional immediately after his graduation from Colorado where he won All-Big Eight honors as a defensive halfback. He's six feet, a solid 165 pounds.

He also was the national collegiate golf champion and had no illusions about pursuing a career in pro football.

"I wasn't big enough. I wasn't fast enough. I wasn't strong enough. That's a tough combination," he said.

It was the highest winning total since the 1963 National Open in Brookline, Mass., when Palmer, Julius Boros and Jacky Cupit tied for the top spot with windblown 293s, nine over par.

Irwin, 29, who had been described as "looking like the guy at the third desk from the left in a place you go to get help on your income tax," nailed down the most prized of all the world's golf titles with a crucial par on the 17th hole.

It was symbolic of the whole tournament—players fighting desperately to save all they could against the par that couldn't be mastered.

Irwin held a two-stroke lead when he went to the tee on the 17th, and promptly drove his ball into the deep, clinging rough that lines the narrow fairways of this 6,961-yard monster of a course in suburban New York.

He had to chop it out of the hay, just getting back to the fairway. He put his third shot on the green, some 12 feet from the cup and, after kneeling and plumb-bobbing the line with his putter, he stroked it home.

He had it won.

Forrest Fezler, the game's heartbreak kid who has come so close so often and has yet to win, came out of the pack to take second at 289 with a final-round 70 under the gloomy, gray skies that stopped drizzling rain just moments before the leaders teed off.

Veterans Bert Yancey and Lou Graham were next at 290. Graham managed to match par 70 and Yancey, in title contention until he took two strokes to get out of a deep, yawning bunker on the 13th hole, had a 72.

Tom Watson, the 24-year-old redhaired golfer who led Irwin by a stroke at the end of three rounds, had still another major disappointment. The tour sophomore has been in position to win more than a half-dozen times and hasn't done it yet. This time he faded back with a horrendous 79. He didn't make a birdie. He was tied with Palmer and Jim Colbert at 292.

The 44-year-old Palmer, who had sought an end to the longest, most dismal, most frustrating slump of his legendary career, was only three shots out after three rounds but went to a fat 76 Sunday.

And Gary Player, the Masters champion who had dreamed of the unaccomplished Grand Slam, a one-year sweep of the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and the PGA, took a fat seven on the ninth hole on his way to 73 and 293.

Player, who had predicted that "this will be a week of disappointment," led the first round and shared the lead at the halfway mark.

Nicklaus, who sought a record-matching four American National championships, was never in it.

He became so frustrated with the glass-slick, contoured, unduating greens that he changed his putter for the final round, the first time in six years he'd changed that club.

It worked. But his last-round 69, one of only eight subpar rounds recorded in the tournament, was too little too late. He finished with a 294 total, but defended the course.

"There is nothing unfair about this course," he said. "It is a very severe test of golf, but it's a fair test. The fairways are wide enough. The rough is severe, but not too severe. The greens aren't too big. It's fair."

Tom Weiskopf, the current British Open champion who almost withdrew after a firstround 76, finished with a 75—296. Johnny Miller, the 1973 winner and the collector of five titles already this season, had a 77—302. Lee Trevino didn't qualify for the final two rounds.

Irwin, one of the few Open champions who wear eyeglasses, has been on the pro tour for seven years. His career has shown steady improvement, with increasing money-winnings every year. He has had $100,000-plus seasons each of the last two years and, with the $35,000 he collected here he earned $131,000 so far this season. He had won only twice before, however, and both victories came in the Heritage Classic at Hilton Head Island, S.C. — in 1971 and 1973.

Quarry, Frazier To Battle

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe

Frazier will be out to prove that he still is still "Smokin' Joe" Monday in Madison Square Garden when he fights Jerry Quarry, who will be trying to shake the rap that he "never wins the big ones." "I think he's as sharp as he's ever been," said trainer Eddie Futch as Frazier prepared to put his career on the line.

The former heavyweight champion has lost two of his last three fights—a knockout by George Foreman when he lost the title and a decision defeat by Muhammad Ali—and Futch said he would not recommend Frazier quit unless he wins impressively.

"That fight (the loss to Ali) only made him more determined to show his best."

"You better believe it," Frazier said when he asked if he thinks about fighting Foreman again.

Quarry goes into the fight with a string of six straight victories since ending a brief retirement about 17 months ago and has lost only six times against 52 pro victories, 29 by knockout.

But four of the defeats especially rankle—he was stopped twice by Muhammad Ali; he lost a decision to Jimmy Ellis in a World Boxing Association title bout in 1968; and he was stopped in seven rounds by Frazier in 1969 when Frazier was recognized as champion by six states.

"If I don't win, I better get out of the business because I'll never be more ready than I am right now," said Quarry who blames personal problems as the reason behind some of his past defeats.

The scheduled 12-rounder will be the first half of a closed-circuit television doubleheader and will start at 10 p.m., EDT. The second fight, which also will be seen on television by the Garden crowd, will be Bob Foster's light heavyweight title defense against Jorge Ahumada.

Adding interest to the Frazier-Quarry fight is the fact that Joe Louis, boxing's legendary "Brown Bomber," has been licensed and appointed by the New York State Athletic Commission as referee.

were engaged in a scoreless pitching duel for six innings but Jimmy Wynn opened the seventh inning with a line hit to left field and raced all the way to third when Cleon Jones fell while pursuing the ball.

Steve Garvey, who leads the league in RBIs with 55, delivered Wynn with a soft liner just past the outstretched glove of second baseman Felix Millan.

The Dodgers scored two more runs on singles by Willie Crawford and Ron Cey and an intentional walk to Dave Lopes and a full-count pass to Andy Messersmith. Bill Buckner greeted reliever Bob Miller with a two-run ground single up the middle.

In other games, Montreal edged San Diego 9-8, Pittsburgh shaded San Francisco, 4-3, Cincinnati downed Philadelphia 5-0, Chicago tipped Houston in 10, 2-1 and St. Louis tripped Atlanta 6-3.

Ron Fairly doubled in the winning run with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning to help rookie Don DeMola earn his first major league victory and boost the Expos to a victory over the Padres in a game played in a steady rain.

The Expos were trailing 8-7 going into the inning. Larry Lintz grounded out and Willie Davis followed with his fourth home run of the year to tie the score 8-8. Losing pitcher Vicente Romo walked Ken Singleton and the Expos outfielder scored the winning run as Fairly doubled to deep center field.

Al Oliver hit a two-run homer and southpaw Jim Rooker scattered five hits to pitch the Pirates to a win over the Giants, giving the Pirates a sweep of the three-game series.

Joe Morgan rapped a double, single and a homer, and Dave Concepcion added a two-run single to lead the Reds over the Phillies in a rain-marred game.

Fred Scherman walked pinch-hitter Andy Thornton with one out in the bottom of the 10th inning, forcing in Rick Monday with the winning run to give the Cubs a decision over the Astros. Scherman replaced Ken Forsch after the Houston loser gave up a triple to Monday with one out. The Astros then elected to purposefully pass Matt Alexander and pinch-hitter Vic Harris.

Lynn McGlothen pitched a seven-hitter and collected three hits to lead the Cardinals to a victory over the Braves, breaking a four game Atlanta winning streak. McGlothen, now 9-3, had the key hit in one Card rally, scored a run in another and began the last one in the ninth which iced the victory.

True Knight Top Weight In Board Of Governors

Omaha — True Knight, owned by the Darby Dan Farm, has been top weighted at 125 pounds for the $50,000-added Board of Governors' Handicap to be run Saturday at Ak-Sar-Ben.

The Board of Governors', for three-year-olds and up at one mile and one-sixteenth, is the first of four big stakes to be contested during the final four weeks of the Ak-Sar-Ben meeting.

It is a prelude to the $100,000-added Cornhusker Handicap at one mile and one-eighth to be run on July 6, and all of the Governors' nominees are also nominated to the Cornhusker.

Three-year-olds will be in the spotlight in the $75,000-added Omaha Gold Cup at one mile and one-sixteenth on June 29 and the $50,000-added President's Cup at one mile and one-eighth on July 13.

Imports have received the top four spots in the Board of Governors' weights by racing secretary John Malveries.

Following True Knight are Fred W. Hooper's Tri Jet at 123, Frazee and Frazee, Inc.'s Finalista, and W. A. Lofton's Tom Tulle at 121 each.

Ak-Sar-Ben's 1973 three-year-old champion Royal Knight, owned by Kenneth Opstein of South Sioux City, shares the 120 impost with Linda Briggs Smith's Woodland Pines and E. Ubarri's Everton II.

Royal Knight won the $21,800 4-H Handicap here last year and the $54,725 Omaha Gold Cup. He was asked to carry 129 pounds in the $79,450 President's Cup, only to lose by a nose to Crimson Falcon. He has won two of five starts and more than $60,000 so far this year. The weights assigned:

Fisk's Power Hitting Paces Boston Victory

By United Press International

Carlton Fisk drove in three runs with a homer and two doubles Sunday when the Boston Red Sox rallied for six runs in the ninth inning to beat the California Angels, 7-4.

Dwight Evans opened the rally with a walk and starter Dick Lange was relieved when he yielded a single to Rick Burleson. Reliever Barry Razzano, who had retired 16 batters in a row, got Dick McAuliffe on a long fly to right but then Mario Guerrero doubled to left to score Boston's second run. Juan Beniquez beat out an infield roller to load the bases and Cecil Cooper followed with a two-run single to tie the contest. Fisk then doubled into the left-field corner for two more runs. After Carl Yastrzemski flew to center, Fisk was caught in a rundown between third and home and managed to score when third baseman Bob Oliver's throw to the plate hit Fisk in the back.

In other games New York edged Oakland 5-3, Cleveland downed Minnesota 3-1 in the second game after losing the opener 3-0, Chicago whipped Baltimore 9-1, and Detroit edged Kansas City 3-2 in 11 innings.

Ninth inning doubles by Elliott Maddox and Bobby Murcer, each of whom had three hits, and a sacrifice fly by Bill Sudakis snapped a 3-3 tie and gave the Yankees their victory over the Oakland A's.

The Yankees tied the score in the seventh on a double by Sudakis on which A's outfielders Reggie Jackson and Billy North collided. North was knocked unconscious for a couple of minutes and left the game but Jackson was only shaken up and moved to center field from his normal right field spot.

In the ninth, Maddox hit a drive over Jackson's head to the base of the centerfield wall and Murcer followed with a double over Joe Rudi's head in left. Then Sudakis lifted a long fly ball to center on which Murcer tagged up at second and beat the relay home for an insurance run.

John Lowenstein drove in two runs and stole four bases to back the seven-hit pitching of Fritz Peterson in the nightcap and give the Indians a doubleheader split with Minnesota.

McEntarffer Combines Unusual

Frank McEntarffer has successfully combined the unusual in athletics and home economics. His story is featured in the June issue of The Christian Athlete by Skip Stogsdill.

Being involved in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes is just one of the many activities that keeps Frank busy, but he was slowed down once and that was this spring when he had his appendix removed.

Frank McEntarffer

"Mac" or Frank, he goes by either or both, has participated in football, basketball, gymnastics, track and baseball.

He will be a sophomore at Nebraska Wesleyan, where he majors in driver's and physical education besides home economics.

Although Frank has been teased about his home economics major, he insists that he has been serious about it from the very start. He credits Marilyn Gade and Rose Tondl at Lincoln East for getting him interested in home economics.

Both are home economic teachers at East, where Frank took his first courses in home economics. It was at East where Frank won an award for being the school's outstanding home economics student.

Mark Made In Athletics

Although he's a good cook, Frank likes sewing best and makes most of his clothes besides articles for his dad, brother and fraternity father.

McEntarffer, pronounced with the r in the middle being silent (Mac-In-Taf-fer), has also made his mark on the athletic field.

As an infielder at East, Frank only committed three errors his junior and senior years and opposing pitchers just managed to strike him out once in 57 times at bat his senior year.

The easy-going athlete has never let his size, 5-8, 145 pounds, bother him and believes it has made him more determined to succeed.

Among Frank's most ardent boosters are his parents, John and Marilyn (better known as "Pete"). They both back him in athletics and his majoring in home economics.

At NWU Frank plays football and baseball and is the manager for the basketball team. This summer he's playing on a semi-pro baseball team.

He was chosen as East's outstanding athlete three straight years and will probably accumulate more athletic honors at NWU.

Besides being active in church functions, Frank was also involved in many activities in school and is an honor roll student. He is helping teach driver's education and has helped teach home economics.

Frank hopes to teach and coach upon graduation, but will have to take some classes at Nebraska to get a major in home economics.

Versatile might even underestimate Mac's abilities and talents, but just as important or possibly even more is the fact that he's humble, well-liked and shares his friendship.

Pearson Loses Race To Petty

Cambridge Junction (AP) — Richard Petty whipped David Pearson in the Motor State 400 Sunday, as stock car racing's biggest money winners staged a classic head-to-head duel before 51,500 spectators.

The confrontation between the two old foes, winners of more than $2.5 million and 300 major races between them, began almost from the start of the event, staged under a race-long threat of rain.

It ended four laps from the finish of the 360-mile affair when Pearson was forced to pit for new tires just as several cars tangled in the third turn to bring out the day's sixth yellow-light.

Golf Win To Haynie

Medina, Ohio (AP) — Sandra Haynie parred a fourth extra hole Sunday to beat Gloria Ehret in a rain-marred play for the $42,500 Ladies Professional Golf Association Medina Open championship.

The victory, worth $5,700, was the 30th career triumph for the 30-year-old Texan from Dallas and her first of 1974.

Miss Haynie two-putted from 25 feet for a par four on the 321-yard fourth hole.

Miss Ehret was short of the green with her approach shot and took a bogey five.

The two, who had matched one-under-par 215s after 54 holes on the soggy Weymouth Valley Country Club course, parred the first three playoff holes before heavy rain interrupted play for 15 minutes on No. 4 tee.

Miss Haynie, starting the day three shots behind leader Sandra Post, stormed from behind with a three-under-par 69.

Rookies, Free Agents Receive NFL Letters

NEW YORK (AP) — John Thompson, executive director of the National Football League's Management Council, said Sunday that all NFL clubs have been sent out letters urging rookies and free agents not to join the Players' Association until the present contract impasse is settled.

Thompson also said he didn't think that negotiations between the owners and players would resume as scheduled Tuesday in Washington. Discussions were terminated Thursday with angry words by both sides.

Thompson, in a telephone interview, explained that the correspondence was mailed to all NFL owners and general managers last Monday, and they were urged to forward the letters to the rookies and free agents. He said he was uncertain how many executives had followed the suggestion, but "I assume that if they haven't done it yet, they will in time."

According to Thompson, the letters were designed to explain to the rookies and free agents their rights under present circumstances.

The letters told the players involved that they would be entitled to any benefits won from collective bargaining whether or not they were members of the NFLPA... as long as they reported to training camp. But if the rookies failed to show at training camps—the San Diego Chargers are scheduled to be the first team to report, on July 4—they would not be eligible to be a member of the bargaining unit.

The union has said it would strike on July 1 if negotiations were not completed by that time. Such a strike would peril the game between the College All-Stars and Super Bowl champions, the Miami Dolphins, set for July 26 at Chicago.

"We are not urging you never to have anything to do with the National Football League Players Association," the letters said in part. "On the contrary, when normal football activities are under way, as we hope they will be soon, there are many beneficial aspects of NFLPA membership with it."

Sports Notes

Unhappy and left-handed pitcher Rudy May was sold by the California Angels to the New York Yankees.

Ossie Blanco was sent to the Cleveland Indians' Oklahoma City farm club of the American Association to make room on the roster for pitcher Steven Arlin, who was acquired from the San Diego Padres.

The New York Yankees announced they are returning catcher Jim Deidel to their Syracuse farm club in the International League.

Despite a one-hour delay to repair a broken gearbox, Frenchmen Henri Pescarolo and Gerard Larrousse brought their blue French Matra-Simca home to win the team's and Pescarolo's third straight Le Mans 24-hour endurance classic.

Joe Frazier weighed in at 212 pounds and Jerry Quarry at 194½ for the scheduled 12-round heavyweight fight at Madison Square Garden.

Reno, Nev., oddsmakers have made Jerry Quarry and Joe Frazier an even match in their 12-round bout.

Ohio Derby Win To Stonewalk

CLEVELAND (AP) — Stonewalk splashed to a victory over Jersey Derby-winner Better Arbitor Sunday in the $100,000 Ohio Derby.

Miguel Rivera, who rode Little Current to victory in the Preakness and Belmont Stakes, guided the Timberland Stable 3-year-old over a sloppy track in 1:53 1-5 for first money of $63,000 and a payoff of $8.20, $4 and $3.20.

Stonewalk, winner of a division of the Gotham and runner-up in the Jersey Derby, was never challenged after taking the lead five-sixteenths of a mile from home. He finished four lengths ahead of Better Arbitor.

Better Arbitor, ridden by Carlos Berrera, got the place over Illinois Derby-winner Sharp Gary. The first two horses each carried 122 pounds, two more than Sharp Gary.

Sea Songster was fourth and 3-2 favorite J.R.'s Pet, the Arkansas Derby winner, was fifth.

Better Arbitor paid $6.40 and $5 and Sharp Gary $4.80.

Kin Run finished sixth and was followed by Green Gambados, Destroyer and No Advance.

Included in those issues is the controversial "Rozelle Rule," which allows the league commissioner to set compensation for a team that loses a player to another club after the athlete has played out his option.

Champion Foster To Defend Title Against Ahumada

Albuquerque, N.M. (AP) — At 35, light heavyweight champion Bob Foster aims to prove he's no refugee from boxing's rocking chair when he battles tough Argentine Jorge Ahumada Monday night.

Foster bristles when his age is mentioned and predicts he'll stop the 28-year-old stocky South American.

That would prove his contention that he's got years left in his title career and also disprove those who think Muhammad Ali may have taken a lot out of Bob.

Since being stopped by the heavyweight Ali at Stateline, Nev., Foster has been forced to 15 rounds twice by South African Pierre Fourie in light heavyweight title matches. Before he fought Ali, Foster had been taken the limit only once in 11 title defenses.

Now the sheriff's sergeant from Albuquerque and his challenger from Argentina battle as part of a closed circuit television double header. It starts with ex-heavyweight champion Joe Frazier fighting Jerry Quarry in New York.

Probably everywhere but Albuquerque, the heavyweights are the main attraction in the twin bill. Here in New Mexico's largest city, the big print goes to home town pride Foster.

He's an 8-5 favorite and coldly declares, "I'm going to stop this guy."

Watching to see if he can do it are two other top-ranking 175 pounders, John Conteh of England and Victor Galindez of Argentina.

Evert, Borg Gain Titles At Paris

PARIS (AP) — Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Bjorn Borg of Sweden turned the French Open Tennis Tournament into a teen-age festival Sunday. Miss Evert, 19, won the women's title, and Borg, who recently became 18, captured the men's championship.

For both Borg and Miss Evert, their French victories were repeats of their triumphs in the Italian Open two weeks ago.

Miss Evert outclassed Olga Morozova of the Soviet Union 6-1, 6-2, in capturing "the biggest title I've ever won."

Miss Evert is the youngest woman to win here since Christine Truman of Britain in 1959. Miss Truman was 18 years, five months. The late Maureen Connolly Brinker was 18 years, eight months when she won her first French title in 1953.

Miss Evert, grunting loudly on each serve and many of her drives before a crowd of 10,000 sitting in bright sunlight on the central court at Roland Garros stadium, played her usual powerful game from the baseline.

Borg had to rally against veteran Manuel Orantes of Spain for a 2-6, 6-7, 6-0, 6-1, 6-1 victory.

Borg is the youngest player—male or female—ever to win a French singles championship, generally regarded as the world clay court championships. Borg was 17 when he won the Italian Open, but turned 18 on June 6 while the French Open was in progress.

Miss Morozova frequently went to the net for volleys, but this left her open to Miss Evert's accurate volleys and untouchable passing shots. The Russian woman's aggressiveness pleased the crowd but didn't get her many points.

Miss Evert was ahead 4-0 in each set before she conceded a game. Miss Morozova won her own service in the fifth game of the first set, and broke Miss Evert in the fifth and seventh games of the second set for her only points.

Miss Evert earned $8,000 and Miss Morozova got $4,000. Borg collected $24,000 and Orantes $12,000.

Prisoners Reportedly Tortured In Uruguay

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Military authorities in Uruguay have resorted to widespread torture of political prisoners to help stamp out the Tupamaro guerrilla movement, investigators of the International Commission of Jurists and Amnesty International said Sunday.

"The situation in Uruguay is much worse than most people realize," Niall MacDermot, secretary-general of the commission, told a news conference. He said that the lowest estimate said 50 per cent of the prisoners were tortured. The torturers were described as "invariably hooded to avoid identification."

MacDermot said that among persons arrested and tortured were "doctors who had given or were believed to have given medical aid to Tupamaros."

MacDermot, a Briton, and Miss Inger Fahlander, Swedish research officer for Amnesty International, visited Uruguay with the consent of the government in April and May. The two organizations are nongovernmental associations involved in human rights causes.

Their report issued Sunday estimates that since July 1972, 3,500 to 4,000 persons have come before investigative authorities and that 1,140 of these are still in custody awaiting trial.

"In addition," the report says, "many other persons have been and continue to be arrested and detained for varying periods without trial."

MacDermot said the torture includes the "statue" treatment, in which he said prisoners are forced to stand up for as long as two or three days; the "submarine" treatment — prolonged and repeated ducking, and electric shock to sensitive areas including gold dental fillings, which he called "excessively painful."

"The first session of ill treatment ... continues until the detainee indicates that he is prepared to make a confession," the report says. "If he then fails to do so ... another session of ill treatment occurs before he is re-interrogated and so on, until he confesses."

MacDermot and Miss Fahlander spoke with government ministers, senior legal and military officials, defense lawyers, released prisoners and relatives of prisoners. They said that military judges told them they received hundreds of complaints of torture but "had not found a single case proved."

"The general view among defense lawyers is that almost all persons detained in military barracks and some of those detained in police stations are still being severely ill-treated either during or as a preliminary to interrogations," the report said.

Regime Bans Papers

Nairobi, Kenya (AP) — President Idi Amin of Uganda has banned several British and Kenyan newspapers from his country, Radio Uganda reported. It said the papers were banned because of "their malicious and unfounded propaganda" against Amin's military regime.

USDA Expert: Meat Profit Hurt Stockmen

A federal agriculture official blamed major food chain stores for "taking too wide a margin in meat prices" as a factor in the financial woes of cattle producers. J. Phil Campbell, U.S. under secretary of agriculture, spoke at a meeting Sunday of the Midwest Association of State Departments of Agriculture, and said "it would be better if we could narrow the margin of profit of the middlemen and pass it back to the farmer." Campbell said investors seeking a tax shelter in cattle feeders had suffered worse losses than the farmer, but that everyone in the cattle business had been hurt. To add to the problem, he said he would be surprised if government projections of the 1974 grain crop would not be reduced somewhat in the next crop report due to be issued in three weeks. This is because of a combination of too much rain in the corn belt and drought in some of the western states. However, the present problems are tempered by government action, he said. "Legislation beginning in 1968 and reinforced by the Agricultural Act of 1970 and the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973 turned American agriculture in the right direction. "Freedom to make their own planting decisions, farmers turned in droves from the allotment patterns that had locked them into the past and moved swiftly into production patterns which minimized costs and maximized efficiency. "As a result, the Corn Belt has become more heavily concentrated in its highest profit crops: corn and soybeans. Northern plains producers have gone more heavily into wheat at the expense of barley and oats. Texas producers have planted more sorghums. "He said farmers "no longer need to tolerate artificial tampering with the marketplace. Once they were captives of the land, No More."
